Ermont Seeks Permission For Recreational Pot Sales

By SCOTT JACKSON

The company that has operated a medical marijuana dispensary on Ricciuti Drive for nearly three years is now seeking city and state approval for recreational marijuana sales.

Ermont hosted a public outreach meeting on its proposal to sell cannabis to all adults age 21 and up Wednesday in the Lincoln-Hancock Community School at 300 Granite St. The meeting was set for

Public Hearing Wednesday At L-H School

6:30 p.m.

Ermont has operated its medical marijuana dispensary on Ricciuti Drive since 2016 and is now seeking permission from the city and the Massachusetts Cannabis Control Commission for recreational sales. The outreach meeting was required as part of the process.

Mayor Thomas Koch, who opposed the November 2016 ballot question that legalized recreational marijuana sales statewide, said he anticipates Ermont will ultimately receive permission to expand into recreational sales.

"I voted against the ballot petition on that, but it's the law of the land now and we're dealing with it," Koch said in a recent interview. "Ermont, as far as the medical use, there haven't been any issues that I'm aware of.

It's gone pretty smoothly. It's kind of out-of-sight, out-of-mind, which was kind of one of the ideas of putting it in that site. They've got a good track record security-wise and business-wise.

"I'm sure the state is going to grant them the license at some point and we're dealing with it."

The mayor toured Ermont's store before it

Two More Projects Seen On Hancock Lot

By SCOTT JACKSON

The developer behind the nearly finished 171-unit apartment building now under construction on Hancock Street in Quincy Center is planning two more projects on the Hancock Lot, which the City Council will review in the fall.

While that project is being reviewed, Mayor Thomas Koch said he will ask the council to take by eminent domain a nearby building that has sat vacant for more than 20 years after being damaged in a fire. And, the companies chosen to build a mixed-use project at the Quincy Center MBTA station continue their due diligence.

In May, Koch introduced a proposed land disposition agreement between the city and LBC Partners for two remaining sections of the Hancock Lot. LBC Partners is the same developer behind Nova Residences, the 171-unit apartment building set to open this fall at 1500 Hancock St.

The LDA would allow the developer to construct a residential building at the corner of lot near the intersection of Revere Road and Mechanic Street - known as R3 in city planning docu-

Boston Man Dies Following Quincy Stabbing

By SCOTT JACKSON

A 55-year-old Boston man died Sunday after he was allegedly stabbed by his wife on July 4 in Quincy.

Quincy police were called to the area of 10 South Central Ave. shortly before 7 p.m. on July 4 for a report of a stabbing, according to David Traub, the spokesman for Norfolk District Attorney Michael Morrissey.

The victim, Biquang He, age 55, of 67 W. Newton

St. in Boston, was transported from the scene first to Quincy Medical Center, then to Boston Medical Center where he underwent surgery, Traub said.

Mr. He's wife, Huixian Liu, age 46, also of 67 W. Newton St. in Boston, was arrested by Quincy police following an investigation at the scene, Traub said. Because of the seriousness of the injuries, Quincy police also contacted the State Police to enter the investigation.

Liu was arraigned on assault charges in Quincy District Court July 5. A not guilty plea was entered on her behalf, Traub said, and she was ordered held without bail pending a dangerousness hearing scheduled for Friday.

Traub said Mr. He died Sunday at Boston Medical Center and the Office of the Chief Medical Examiner has accepted the case for an autopsy, which had yet to be performed as of noon on Monday. Liu could face additional charges pending further investigation.

"Prosecutors will examine the existing assault charges in light of the victim's death, and the information revealed by the autopsy, in advance of her Friday court appearance," Traub said.

Free Shade Trees Available

The Department of Conservation and Recreation announces the third annual Greening The Gateway Cities Program.

Quincy property owners in designated sections of North Quincy/Wollaston, and Germantown/Snug Harbor, are eligible for free trees to be planted on their properties. To be considered, properties need to fall within certain boundaries deemed by D.C.R.

To ensure the tree's survival, the property owner must commit to watering the new trees for a period of at least two years, while the tree roots are established. The program has already planted 869 trees in Quincy. The goal is to plant another 400 trees this season.

Trees can be planted anywhere on the property, including rear, side, or front yards. Residents can pick from a wide selection and obtain advice on appropriate trees for the available space. Popular varieties among Quincy residents are ginkgos, elms, oaks, lindens, cherries, and serviceberries, but residents can select from about 80 different varieties. Trees can be planted on either private or public property.

To participate, residents should contact the Department of Conservation and Recreation at 617-626-1570. A DCR forester will meet the owners to discuss what trees would be appropriate, and to help owners select the best tree for the space available. Chinese-speaking residents who need translation should call Quincy Asian Resources Inc. at 617-472-2200 and ask about the "Free Trees" program. QARI is the local outreach agency for this program, and they will work with residents to ensure they understand the program details.

This opportunity is part of the Greening the Gateway Cities Program. "Recently, the 20,000th tree was planted in Massachusetts at North Quincy High School thanks to this program," Mayor Thomas Koch said. "Gov. Charlie Baker helped plant three seedless Sweetgum trees out in front of North Quincy High School."

Trees help clean the air and retain water during storms, and buffer properties from strong winds and sun, so they often save property owners money by reducing heating and cooling needs. Trees also lessen street noise and provide habitat for birds.

The North Quincy/Wollaston eligible planting area is between Quincy Shore Drive, Beach St./Beale St., Belmont St., Squantum St., Hancock St., and Saga-

Koch Stands With Yakoo

By SCOTT JACKSON

Mayor Thomas Koch defended North Quincy High School's mascot amid a renewed push to ban public schools from using Native American mascots.

The bill, now pending in the House of Representatives on Beacon Hill, would bar public high schools and public colleges from using Native American mascots. A similar bill was introduced in the Senate two years ago but did not advance out of committee.

Koch, in a recent interview, said he was unaware of a June public hearing on the latest proposal and does not believe state lawmakers are keen on passing the bill.

"I didn't know about the hearing in town," Koch said. "I don't know the Legislature is going to touch this. I don't know that there will ever be a vote on it."

North Quincy High School would be one of the school's affected by the bill if it were approved. The school's mascot, Yakoo, is based on a caricature of North Quincy High graduate Dr. Allan Yacubian, who is not Native American. He is of Armenian descent. Yakoo is commonly shown wearing a feathered headdress and carrying a hammer which represents hard work and perseverance.

Koch, a graduate of North Quincy High School, said he supports the mascot because it is viewed positively by the school's students.

"I don't find it offensive. The kids take great pride in it. It's a mascot that they take pride in - the work ethic, the pride they have in the school, the excellence they have in the educational experience up there," Koch said. "I think it's viewed from the community as something very positive. "I don't have that ultimate decision. We'll see what my colleagues on the School Committee decide, but I don't think we need a vote. If there is a vote, I would certainly vote to reaffirm."

Koch, who is the chairman of the School Committee, said the school board should take up the matter only if students at North Quincy High School began to express concerns about the mascot.

"If this was emanating from the student body at North with great concerns about their mascot, then I think it has more merit. I think it is people that are from the outside looking in that don't fully understand," Koch said. "From my experience over the years - and my kid just graduated there recently as well - the mascot has always been viewed as something very positive for the school. I stand with it."

"Again, if the kids came forward - not one kid, but if a lot of kids came forward - to say they have concerns and want to look at it, then I think the School Committee ought to be listening and perhaps making adjustments. But this thing has not been driven by the school community. It's not an issue here."

Koch said he considered the matter settled in 1995, when federal officials said the school could keep the mascot.

"It was kind of settled in the '90s when the feds were involved. They came in and did not order it to be removed," the mayor said. "There was a lot of discussion around it at the time - a lot of different opinions at the time - and the feds said it could stay."

Career Tech Program Offers Healthcare Apprenticeships

First Of Its Kind In The State

By TOM GORMAN

Students in the Quincy Public Schools' Career Technology Engineering program will have the opportunity to serve as a registered healthcare apprentice through the district's partnership with the South Shore Health System – the first of its kind in the state.

Two high school students, one each from Quincy High and Weymouth High schools, will serve as apprentices in various healthcare areas over the next year which could lead to employment opportunities. The program begins this summer.

"Within a 12-month period, the apprentices will participate in a nurse residency process including four major healthcare components – Q Care (walk-in clinic), clinical care, home care, and in the ambulatory clinic at the South Shore Health System's cancer center," the district's Career and Vocational Technical Education (CVTE) Executive Director Keith Segalla told the school committee recently during a presentation by the CVTE advisory board. "This way, the apprentice will have a variety of experiences across the system."

After completing the apprenticeship, the students will be able to apply for a nursing assistant or medical assistant position at the South Shore Health System. "We're very excited about this relationship with Mass. Hire and South Shore Health System," Segalla said. "The South Shore Health System has developed a model that is second to none for apprenticeship"

Segalla said the program may be expanded next summer to allow a total of six students and include North Quincy High School and more students from Quincy High.

The apprenticeship program was developed through the school system's partnership with Quincy College, the South Shore Workforce's Mass. Hire, and South Shore Health System, which includes Weymouth's South Shore

Career Technology Program Offers Healthcare Apprenticeships

Hospital in conjunction with Massachusetts apprenticeship standards.

Segalla said South Shore Health System officials reviewed the district's CVTE curriculum and suggested some enhancements. These included developing courses for phlebotomy and EKG.

This fall, Quincy College will offer an offsite dual enrollment 38 hour phlebotomy training program for 24 students.

Rebecca McInnis, chairperson of Quincy High School's CVTE program, explained the CVTE program offers 22 courses at Quincy High and North Quincy High schools. She said there are 136 advisory team members for both high schools that represent organized labor, business, industry, and post-secondary institutions along with community members and students.

"The program provides work-based paid and unpaid job learning practices including job shadowing, clinical placements, apprenticeships, internships, co-ops, and employment opportunities which provide relevant and essential live work experiences for our students," she said.

The CVTE program is partly funded through grants including the Mass. Workforce Skills grant that has awarded more than $607,000 to the district over the past three years. Segalla said the grant has provided upgraded, industry specific, state-of-the-art equipment for such programs as Information Technology at both North Quincy and Quincy High, engineering and metal technology at Quincy High, and North Quincy High's television and film production course.

"We are certainly on a roll with these funds," said Segalla.

Lynn Courtney of Massachusetts Workforce's MassHire said Quincy received a competitive cybersecurity grant where two Quincy High School juniors were dual enrolled in Bristol Community College cybersecurity course where they received 22 college credits upon completion of the program this spring. This summer, the students are participating in an internship at a local company.

She noted that through Gov. Charlie Baker's Youth Works program, 80 low-income Quincy students last summer participated in a summer employment program where they received 15 hours of training in workplace safety and professionalism.

"They were then placed in jobs here in Quincy where they gained experience in the work of work," said Courtney.

Among the summer jobs were childcare providers, lab assistants at a water testing facility, Information Technology technicians, and maintenance workers.

"That is an array of skills that they will bring with them as they move on in their careers," Courtney said.

She noted the students earned a total of $140,000 "much of which went back to local businesses."

Teachers are also trained through the state Workforce Skills program where they intern at local companies. This summer, a health instructor will intern at South Shore Health Hospital.

Courtney also explained that the state Department of Elementary and Secondary Education has initiatives allowing Workforce Skills to partner with the district and helping students connect to part-time jobs, resume development, and interview preparation.

She added that her organization sponsors the annual Credit for Life Fair for Quincy and North Quincy high seniors career development activities.

Courtney said federal monies that helped support the evening high school program have "been significantly cut over the past few years" impacting the financial support of the program. This year, the city has included the evening high school program in the school operating budget.

Committee Vice Chairperson Emily Lebo praised the CVTE program and the partnership. She noted how the small amount of grant money is stretched.

"It's magic how you spread that paltry amount the state gives you," she said.

Segalla expressed appreciation to the committee for supporting the CVTE program and for increasing funding and offerings. He said the CVTE program provides real world training for students.

"There is much to celebrate as our students set out into the world to navigate their next steps on the road to becoming successful citizens," said Segalla.

In other matters, the committee endorsed a city council resolution to oppose the Federal Communications Commission proposal to allow television cable companies to no longer cover local access channels' operating costs that is now required. Under this proposal, local access franchises could lose between $100,000 and $500,000 resulting in reduced local programming and coverage of events and government meetings.

Quincy School Supt. Dr. Richard DeCristofaro informed the committee that North Quincy High School student Joanne Setow placed first in the Harvard Political Review Essay Contest.

"The competition aims to recognize and reward youth engagement in politics and to develop journalism skills in young writers," North Quincy High principal Robert Shaw wrote in the school's newsletter, recognizing Setow's accomplishment.

Setow will receive a financial reward and be recognized at the upcoming Harvard Political Review's 50th anniversary celebration.

MA Public Health Investigation Triggers Multistate Voluntary Recall Of Some Packaged Vegetables Due To Listeria Concerns

The US Food and Drug Administration (FDA) announced that a Maine-based company has voluntarily recalled some of its packaged vegetables over concerns about possible contamination with the bacteria Listeria monocytogenes, following food product testing conducted by the Massachusetts Department of Public Health (DPH).

Out of an abundance of caution, the manufacturer, Growers Express, said it was recalling packaged varieties of fresh vegetable products, including butternut squash, cauliflower, zucchini, and a butternut squash-based veggie bowl sold under the brand names Green Giant Fresh, Growers Express, Signature Farms, and Trader Joe's. The FDA released a list of the stores and states affected, which includes stores in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Vermont, and Connecticut.

The possible contamination was discovered in packaged vegetables purchased during surveillance activities conducted by the DPH Food Protection Program (through the FDA-funded Rapid Response Team in DPH's Working Group for Foodborne Illness Control). Testing completed on Thursday, June 27, by the Massachusetts State Public Health Laboratory confirmed the presence of Listeria monocytogenes in a bag of Green Giant Fresh Zucchini Noodles purchased at a Massachusetts Stop & Shop. The FDA announced the company's voluntary recall on Monday, July 1.

"This case illustrates the benefits of public health and private industry working together to protect our food supply and prevent the possible spread of illness," said Public Health Commissioner Monica Bharel, MD, MPH. "I applaud Growers Express for taking immediate steps to issue the voluntary recall to protect consumers."

Consumption of food contaminated with Listeria monocytogenes can cause listeriosis. Listeriosis can cause high fever, severe headache, neck stiffness, and nausea. It can also result in miscarriages and stillbirths, as well as serious and sometimes fatal infections in those with weakened immune systems, such as infants, the elderly, and people with HIV infection or those undergoing chemotherapy. If any of the described symptoms are exhibited, people should seek medical attention.

To date, DPH has received no reports of illness associated with this product. DPH is conducting follow-up testing of the product to confirm the scope of the contamination.

This is the second time in as many years that a DPH investigation has initiated a multistate food recall. Last year, DPH disease investigators traced a rare strain of Salmonella to frozen shredded coconut, prompting the FDA and the distributor to issue a multistate recall. DPH discovered the unusual Salmonella strain while investigating a single case of Salmonella.

THIS IS A 1907 real photo postcard view of the old Houghs Neck fire station just after it was built on the corner of Manet Avenue and Sea Street. This building cost $5,000 and it replaced an old shack that had been moved down from Wollaston. It was the new home to Hose Company No. 5, which was equipped with a new horse-drawn combination hose and chemical wagon with four ladders. In charge was Captain W.H. Taylor shown here with his steward and two call men and their dog. The electric trolley tracks coming from Manet Avenue onto Sea Street can be seen under the horses. The present fire station on this site was built in 1947.

Remembering Pack Halpin - 'Shark Man'

I met Pack on Wollaston Beach in summer 1992.

Like many others, I had pulled off Quincy Shore Drive after seeing a throng of people there. Once I was on the beach, a couple explained to me everyone's reason for gathering. Just then, I witnessed out in Quincy Bay the largest dorsal fin I've ever seen sticking out of water.

For many of us, it was our first-ever shark sighting. I asked someone how long the shark had been in the bay. He pointed to Pack, saying "That guy over there fishing is trying to catch him."

I went over to Pack, introduced myself, and asked him about the shark. He said he had already hooked it, and had lost his line. He pointed to a group of people he said had come to Quincy from the New England Aquarium. Pack was perplexed by their overzealousness in berating him for casting out in the water. His answer, "Like I was going to reel in a shark with 10 pound test?"

I asked Pack what it felt like when the shark took the hook before the line snapped. I'll never forget his reply: "It was like hooking the back of a car as it's pulling away. The power of the thing is amazing."

As it turned out, Pack had hooked a sick and disoriented basking shark. Rescuers led it out of Quincy Bay, only to learn that its body was discovered on rocks along Squantum's shore the next day.

In the years that followed, I affectionately called Pack "Shark Man" whenever I saw him. We developed the kind of friendship where we could pick up conversation where we left off, even if it had been months in between. We talked about our families and life. I learned of his health travails, but it never diminished his sense of humor or his spirit.

My life is a little richer for having known him.

Thoughts About The Long Island Bridge

In regards to the Long Island Bridge, I understand that the mayor of Boston is still planning on reconstruction of the bridge and then connect it to Moon Island in Quincy. I am sure that the taxpayers of Squantum are against the whole thing.

My question is: why can't the city of Boston build the bridge from the Boston side and problem solved. Or, the City of Quincy buy the island from Boston and turn it in to a hotel and camping area.

There is money to be made on that idea. The bridge can be built from the Marina Bay section of Quincy.

Just a thought.

Quincy Receives 8th John A. Sasso National Award

Mayor Thomas Koch and Planning Director James Fatseas announce the City of Quincy received the John A. Sasso National Community Development Week Award during the recent National Community Development Association (NCDA) 50th Anniversary conference in Jacksonville, FL.

This is the eighth time the city has received the award since 2004. The Department of Planning and Community Development (PCD) coordinates the Community Development Week (CD Week) efforts. Sean Glennon, Community Development director, and Melissa Pond, principal planner, attended the conference and accepted the award on behalf of the city.

The annual award recognizes communities for exemplary efforts to raise awareness about the need and importance of the U.S. Department of Housing & Urban Development (HUD) Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) and HOME program during the annual "National Community Development Week," most recently held April 22-27.

During CD Week, PCD engaged approximately 250 participants across 11 events, in addition to the department's traditional and social media campaign in collaboration with 13 organizations.

PCD assisted with the planning and outreach process of Community Development Week strategy on the national level, especially promoting the #CDWeek2019 social media campaign. Melissa Pond provided communications strategy guidance, specifically geared towards Community Development Week in two national presentations including the January 2019 NCDA Legislative Meeting in Washington, D.C., as well as a March 2019 CDBG Coalition webinar, moderated by the President of the U.S. Conference of Mayors.

As an extension of its CD Week activities, Mayor Koch recognized Gov. Charlie Baker with the city's Annual Community Service Award, which was presented at the ribbon cutting ceremony of the Watson workforce housing project in Quincy Point on June 24, 2019.

"I am very pleased with NCDA's continued recognition of our Community Development Week activities," Koch said. "I thank Planning Director Jim Fatseas and Community Development Director Sean Glennon and their staff for their tremendous efforts in administering these federal resources for our residents, and I congratulate them on achieving this national recognition once again."

Also at the Jacksonville conference, Melissa Pond presented best practices during two sessions: CDBG

Public Services and Citizen Participation.

Since 1974, CDBG has invested $90 Million in Quincy; and since 1992, HOME has invested $20 Million in the Quincy HOME Consortium, including the communities of Weymouth, Braintree, Milton, and Holbrook. NCDA connects and equips community development professionals from across the country who administer CDBG and other HUD programs. The sold-out conference in Jacksonville was the largest annual conference the organization has ever had.

Groups Band Together To Build 50 Beds For Local Children

Representatives from the local community came together recently with the sole purpose of supporting the first-ever South Shore Build A Bed event sponsored by Quincy Credit Union.

A Bed for Every Child project is an initiative of the Massachusetts Coalition for the Homeless that provides children growing up in poverty with a bed of their own. As part of the collaboration, teams were formed from QCU board members and employees, their family members, Quincy police and Quincy firefighters, North Quincy High Junior Air Force ROTC, Girls Scouts, Boy Scouts and church groups. These volunteers worked side-by-side in the QCU parking lot to assemble close to 50 beds for children in the Quincy community.

"QCU's partnership with the Mass Coalition for the Homeless taught us several things," Quincy Credit Union Chief Corporate Communications Officer Judy Brazil said. "We learned that the need for beds is great, over 200 requests for beds per month are received. But more importantly, we learned that our community, including our employees and board members, can be depended on to help. We asked and they came! We are monumentally grateful."

To meet the growing need, A Bed for Every Child created "Build a Bed" where teams of 3 to 4 people come together to build and paint twin beds. Upon its completion A Bed for Every Child delivers the bed frame, a new twin mattress and bedding made with love from volunteers. The beds assembled at the QCU event, will be distributed to families in the Quincy area.

AMONG THE COMMUNITY groups that supported the first-ever South Shore Build A Bed event sponsored by Quincy Credit Union were Girl Scouts and Boy Scouts (shown above) and Quincy police officers and Quincy firefighters (below).

Donations can be made online at <https://www.abedforeverychild.org/donate-now>

Quincy Credit Union provides financial services to over 33,000 Members operating from two locations;

100 Quincy Ave., Quincy and 519 Columbian St., Weymouth. Membership is available to those who live or work in Norfolk, Plymouth Counties and Dorchester, and their family members.

Discover Quincy Promoting Arts, Culture, Recreational Activities

By MARGARET
LaFOREST

Discover Quincy is partnering with many local organizations to showcase Quincy's arts and culture, community, historic and recreational assets for the 50 Days of Freedom Program Series schedule which continues through Aug. 3.

Each day features at least one free event, while some events may accept donations and others may have an admission fee.

It is always special to celebrate occasions in the City of Presidents and the Presidential Wreath Laying in honor of John Quincy Adams, Sixth President of the United States of America is one not to miss.

Each year on their birthday anniversaries the president of the United States sends a wreath to the church to be placed on the tombs of the Presidents. The tradition started during the administration of President Lyndon Johnson whereby a wreath of red, white and blue flowers are sent to the burial place of all deceased presidents on the anniversary of their birthday.

This free, public ceremony will be held at the United First Parish Church, 1306 Hancock St. on Thursday, July 11th at noon.

That evening, the Concerts @ The Crane series kicks off with Sparrow Blue; Honest charm that transports you from a metallic time machine into a swinging barn dance in 1947. These free concerts are held at 7 p.m. on the Thomas Crane Public Library Lawn.

Performances will be held weekly until Aug. 1st. Stop into the bookshop operated by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library prior to the show.

On Friday, July 12, stop by the Quincy Farmers Market at Pageant Field for your local produce, food vendors and live music performances.

On Saturday, join Quincycles for a free guided ride to the Boston Waterfront. The Long Ride meets at City Hall, Quincy Center at 7:30 a.m. and the Short Ride meets at the parking area across the street from Murphy Memorial Hockey Rink, 1881 William J. Day Blvd., South Boston at 8:45 a.m.

The Wollaston Hill Neighborhood Association welcomes all to Saturdays in the Park each Saturday through Aug. 3rd for free live music, lawn games, and other wellness-related activities. Each week features a beer garden and food vendors at Safford Park, Beale Street from noon to 6 p.m.

On Sunday, July 14th, visit your choice of historic attractions open only a few times a year in our neighboring towns.

Free tours of the Suffolk Resolves House, 1370 Canton Ave, Milton are offered from 1 to 3 p.m. The Suffolk Resolves, which were signed here on Sept. 9, 1774 and carried by Paul Revere to the First Continental Congress in Philadelphia, were a major development in colonial animosity leading to the adoption of the Declaration of Independence. The house is now the headquarters of the Milton Historical Society which shares stories of the town's people, places and institutions.

Tours of the Abigail Adams Birthplace, 180 Norton St., Weymouth are offered from 1 to 4 p.m.; $5 per adult, $1 each for children under 12. As First Lady to the Second President of the United States and mother of the Sixth President, Abigail is one of the most respected and influential women of the early revolutionary period of American history. Built in 1685, the Abigail Adams Birthplace was home to this exceptional woman for the first 20 years of her life until she married John Adams in 1764.

Each Monday, in collaboration with the City of Quincy, a free outdoor movie will be shown on the Hancock-Adams Common at dusk, approximately 8:30 p.m.

Have you ever been to a film musical and had the uncontrollable urge to burst into song? Then join us on July 15 for "Grease: Sing a Long." Sit back and watch Danny & Sandy and the gang, while singing (and dancing) along to the lyrics on the screen.

Each Tuesday, the City of Quincy Recreation Department and Thomas Crane Public Library partner for Tot Lot Tuesdays on Wollaston Beach.

On Wednesday, July 17, Stop & Shop Headquarters, 1385 Hancock St., Quincy Center, hosts a lunchtime concert series featuring Fred Ellsworth. In the evening, Discover Quincy and the Friends of Wollaston Beach host a concert at 6 p.m. with Soul Box drawing from influences of funk, soul, rock, and reggae, as they create a sound that is simultaneously new and classic.

Cinnamon Bread French Toast

By MARIE

2 teaspoons of cinnamon

At a recent birthday brunch at my daughter Nancy and Jed's house, a delicious Cinnamon Bread French toast was the highlight of the brunch.

If you haven't tried cinnamon bread, just plain or toasted you're in for a surprise when you do. This breakfast treat was a welcomed addition and a nice compliment to the rest of the food. This bread comes unsliced.

Recipe and Directions:

- 1 ½ loaves of cinnamon bread cut in cubes
- 6 eggs
- 3 cups of milk
- ½ cup brown sugar

In a bowl, beat the eggs add the milk and whisk until well blended; gradually add the brown sugar and mix gently.

In a greased baking dish place a layer of the bread evenly, add some of the egg mixture, sprinkle one teaspoon of cinnamon over that layer, add another layer of the bread and top with rest of the eggs and the rest of the cinnamon.

Before you bake, press down with spoon until bread is submerged in liquid; refrigerate about one hour.

Cover in aluminum foil, not tightly (like a tent.)

Bake at 350 degree oven for one hour.

When cooled cut in squares. It is delicious!

Banana Chia Pudding

By SUSIE

Here is a recipe from Food Matters that is so good and a powerhouse of nutrition for breakfast, lunch, or a yummy healthy snack. (This also helps with regularity due to the chia seeds.)

Inexpensive, easy, delish, and healthy. I love bringing this to the office because I make it the night before and throw it in my bag.

This is also great for the summer when you want something creamy and not too sweet, but just sweet enough.

You also can change things up. You can top with anything else you can think of, even chocolate chips and shredded coconut.

BANANA CHIA PUDDING Recipe and Directions

- 3 bananas
- 6 dates, pitted
- 1½ cups water
- 1 can (14 oz) coconut milk
- Pinch of sea salt
- ½ cup + 1 tbsp chia seeds
- ¼ cup roasted sunflower & pumpkin

seed mix (recipe below)

- 1 tbsp hemp seeds
- 1 cup sliced strawberries

1. Add bananas, dates, water, coconut milk and sea salt to a blender.

2. Blend thoroughly.

3. Pour into a glass storage container. Add chia seeds and stir. Place in the refrigerator for at least 4 hours, or preferably overnight.

4. Spoon 1 cup of chia pudding into a bowl and top with sliced strawberries, hemp seeds, roasted sunflower and pumpkin seeds.

Bank Of Canton Honored At Banking Choice Awards

Bank of Canton was honored at the 2019 Banking Choice Awards in Springfield, Massachusetts, for achieving second place in the independent Banking Benchmarks survey's Community Contribution category for the Greater Boston region.

The Banking Choice Awards are based on the results of the Banking Benchmarks survey, conducted by independent research and consulting firm Customer Experience Solutions, LLC. Over 278,000 survey responses were gathered from Massachusetts participants, and 162 banking institutions across five Massachusetts state regions were ranked in the categories of Overall Quality, Customer Service, Technology, and Community Contribution.

"We're honored to receive the silver Community Contribution award," said Stephen Costello, president and CEO of Bank of Canton. "We take our responsibility as a mutual bank very seriously: to make a difference in the lives of those who live and work in our communities. Supporting the organizations and causes that improve the lives of others is a cornerstone of that commitment."

The rankings include all institutions that survey respondents use for banking services, including community banks, regional banks, national banks, in-state banks, out-of-state banks, credit unions, online banks and non-banks.

"This recognition is a credit to our customers," continued Costello. "Their decision to bank with us is what fuels our charitable giving program. We couldn't provide the amount of community support that we do without their business."

Since 2005, Bank of Canton has given more than $2.1 million to local charities and nonprofit organizations through donations and sponsorships. The bank's contributions have helped fund financial literacy programs for children and seniors, educational workshops for first-time home buyers, and cultural and artistic enrichment programs. The bank's employees hold leadership positions in several civic and non-profit organizations across the Greater Boston and South Shore areas as well.

Heat Waves And The Effect On The Human Body

A Message From Ruth Jones, City Of Quincy Health Commissioner

By RUTH JONES
MSPH, BSN, RN,
BC, CP-FS

Some might like it hot, but extreme heat can overwhelm the human body. With possible heat waves on the horizon, the risk of heat-related health problems may also be on the upsurge.

According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), extreme heat is responsible for an average of 700 deaths each year in the U.S.

Human bodies dissipate heat by varying the rate and depth of blood circulation, by losing water through the skin and sweat glands, and as a last resort by panting, when blood is heated above 98.6 degrees. The heart begins to pump more blood, blood vessels dilate to accommodate the amplified flow, and the bundles of minute capillaries threading through the upper layers of skin are put into action. The body's blood is circulated closer to the skin's surface, and excess heat drains off into the cooler atmosphere, diffusing through the skin as perspiration. The skin handles about 90 percent of the body's heat dissipating function. Sweating, by itself, does little to cool the body, unless the water is removed by evaporation. High relative humidity slows evaporation, so humidity affects our body's cooling mechanisms.

Heat exhaustion is a comparatively common reaction to severe heat and can include symptoms such as dizziness, headache and fainting. It can usually be remedied with rest, a cool environment and hydration, including replacement of electrolytes, which are essential for muscle and other body functions. Heat stroke is more severe and requires medical attention. It is often accompanied by dry skin, body temperature exceeding 103 degrees Fahrenheit, confusion and occasionally unconsciousness.

The impact of sustained extreme heat on the human body can be devastating. The systems in the human body that enable it to adapt to heat become overwhelmed. When a person is exposed to heat for an extended period of time, the initial body function that is affected, is the ability to sweat. Once a person stops perspiring, in a very short interval, a person can move from heat exhaustion to heat stroke.

It commences with perspiring profusely, and when that ceases, the body becomes extremely hot. Eventually that begins to affect the brain, and that's when people begin to get confused and can lose consciousness. The analogy commonly used is if you're driving a car and you notice that the temperature light comes on when the cooling system of the car is becoming overwhelmed. If you turn off the car and let it cool, ultimately you can begin driving again. But if you continue to drive the car, the problem goes beyond the cooling system to affect the engine, and eventually the car will stop. As the body temperature increases very rapidly, the central nervous system and circulatory system are impacted, similar to that car engine.

Before someone gets total heat stroke, the person may exhibit reactions to the excessive heat. Heat rash and muscle cramps can be early signs of people being overwhelmed by heat. If those aren't treated promptly, it can lead to more severe symptoms. Cramping of muscles can occur as a result of a number of different issues, including electrolytes not getting to the muscles. It is important that people be aware that their skin turning red and dry are indicators that heat is impacting them.

Certain people may be more vulnerable to extended high temperatures. We know the high risk factors for dying from heat are often urban dwellers who are elderly, isolated and don't have access to air conditioning. In a study from the 1995 Chicago heat wave, it was found that certain medications put people at higher risk including, diuretics for high blood pressure, and beta blockers. There are also findings that have shown that certain mental health medications may impact a person's ability to deal with the heat. The risk of heat-related illness varies from person to person. A person's general health influences how well the person adapts to heat. Those with extra weight often have trouble in hot situations as the body has difficulty maintaining a good heat balance. Age (particularly for people about 45 years and older), poor general health, and a low level of fitness will make people more susceptible to feeling the extremes of heat. Medical conditions can also increase how susceptible the body is. People with heart disease, high blood pressure, respiratory disease and uncontrolled diabetes may need to take special precautions. In addition, people with skin diseases and rashes may be more susceptible to heat. Other factors include circulatory system capacity, sweat production and the ability to regulate electrolyte balance. Subsequently, those who are exercising or working in the heat, but who don't meet those criteria, can also be putting themselves in jeopardy.

Heat-related illnesses are largely preventable by taking some basic precautions. The single best way to reduce your heat stress risks while working is to steadily replenish the water you lose as sweat. Drinking small amounts frequently, such as 6 to 8 ounces every 15 minutes, is more effective than large amounts less often. Most people do not feel thirsty until their fluid loss reaches 2 percent of body weight and is already affecting them, so keep in mind relying on thirst as a signal to drink is a dangerous practice. The other leading factor that averts death from heat is access to air conditioning. Fans are not a successful tool in preventing overheating in extremely hot temperatures, and can actually worsen the situation.

Spending a day of fun in the sun with friends or family is a perfect getaway for a long weekend, but as Mother Nature turns up the heat, be aware of these predictable and preventable perils.

AUTO DEALER Dan Quirk (back row, second from right) recently presented a gift of $500,000 to the South Shore YMCA in support of the Y's summer camp program in Quincy. Dan Quirk Gifts $500,000 To YMCA In Support Of Summer Camp Program

The South Shore YMCA has received a $500,000 gift from Dan Quirk in support of the Y's summer camp program in Quincy.

In honor of Quirk's gift, the Y summer camp in Quincy located at Snug Harbor Elementary School has been renamed Camp Quirk.

The South Shore YMCA has been providing summer camp services for the youth of the South Shore since it opened "Kamp Kwinzy" on Robbins Pond in East Bridgewater in 1919, one hundred years ago. Today, it offers summer day camp programs in Quincy, at Camp Gordon Clark at the Emerson YMCA in Hanover and at the South Shore Natural Science Center, as well as residential camps for boys and girls at Camp Burgess and Hayward in Sandwich.

"From our earliest days, summer camp has been a core component of our youth development mission," said

Paul Gorman, President and CEO of the South Shore YMCA. "Camp serves many purposes, from basic childcare for working families to summer learning loss prevention, teen leadership development and more. We are truly grateful that Mr. Quirk believes so strongly in supporting the healthy development of children. His transformative gift will have a major impact on thousands of children."

Dan Quirk's economic impact on the region has been felt for more than 40 years. He opened his first Chevy dealership in Braintree in 1977, and now owns and operates 15 dealerships in eastern Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire. He has known – and employed – generations of South Shore residents who grew up in the Quincy area, and is proud to know that he is supporting the next generation of South Shore kids with opportunities to grow and thrive.

"For decades now, Quirk Automotive and our family have been committed to giving South Shore residents the keys they need to move forward," said Dan Quirk. "We are proud to continue to support the South Shore YMCA in its focus on health and development of our area's youth, especially through summer camp."

"Kids who are unable to attend summer camp activities can fall behind their peers once school starts again in the fall," said Gorman. "Our goals at the Y are to ensure that we offer every kid access to camp, and that our camps are safe, fun and engaging learning and recreational environments. Mr. Quirk's gift helps the South Shore YMCA to extend financial assistance to more families in need, ensuring that more children in our community can enjoy the benefits of camp for years to come."

"Every child deserves opportunity," said Quirk. "I like to think that the next great South Shore entrepreneur is out there somewhere, and that in some small way this gift will help bring the next great idea forward."

The following events and activities for children are scheduled at the Thomas Crane Public Library July 10 through July 16.

Summer Library Adventure – Universe of Stories

This summer we will be celebrating the 50th anniversary of the Apollo 11 Moon Landing and all things space with our Summer Library Adventure – Universe of Stories. Children ages 0-12 are invited to participate in our summer reading program and join us for 2 months of FREE summer activities.

Stop by any Quincy library location, check out our website or download the Beanstack Tracker app to register for our summer reading program. Complete 10 missions and you will be rewarded with a medal at our end of summer medal ceremony.

Visit our summer reading website at thomascranelibrary.org to learn about all of the other fun free activities coming up this summer.

Summer Library Quests

This summer, turn a walk-around the library into a scavenger hunt. In the Children's room at the Main Library or at the North Quincy Branch, children can follow directions to hunt for letter clues to spell out a mystery phrase. At Wollaston we'll have hidden pictures to search for, find the picture and find a letter in our mystery word/phrase.

Younger children can search just in the Children's Room; older kids age 10 and up can try their luck with a puzzle that allows them to explore all the floors of the library. This is aimed at children who are able to read, but can be enjoyed by younger ones with the help of a parent.

LEGO Challenge @Wollaston

Are you up for the LEGO Challenge? Each week, beginning July 10th we will have a new challenge to tackle and plenty of LEGO to do it! Come in any time between 2 and 4 p.m. and check out the challenge for the week. Can you build a vehicle using only one color of brick? How tall a tower can you make? Can you work with someone else to build a city? Join us and see what you can build every Wednesday this summer!

Pajama Storytime

Beginning Wednesday, July 10th at 6:30 p.m. join us for a summer-long series of pajama storytimes designed especially for children aged 2-5 and their parents. Join us for 45 minutes of interactive stories, songs, and rhymes. This program is a great time for you and your children to sing, dance, listen, and talk with each other.

Preschool Discovery: Space @Wollaston

On Thursday July 11th at 10 a.m. bring your preschooler in to the Wollaston Branch Library for some out of this world science. We'll explore meteors, orbits, constellations, our solar system, and more! This program is for children ages 3-5 accompanied by an adult.

Liberated Crafts @ North Quincy

Thursdays 2 - 4 p.m.

Ages up to 8

North Quincy

Drop into the North Quincy Branch on Thursday afternoon July 11th between 2 and 4 p.m. for crafting without borders. Each week will feature a specific type of craft project, from animal visors to bookmarks, but your child can also use the materials to create something completely new. Our craft for July 11th – Animal visors.

Night Owls Book Group - Space Dumplings

This month The Night Owls Book Group for children entering grades 3 and 4 will be meeting in the Main Library Children's room at 7 p.m. on Thursday, July 11.

We will be reading Space Dumplings by Craig Thompson. For Violet Marlocke, family is the most important thing in the whole galaxy. So when her father goes missing while on a hazardous job, she can't just sit around and do nothing. To get him back, Violet throws caution to the stars and sets out with a group of misfit friends on a quest to find him. But space is vast and dangerous, and she soon discovers that her dad is in big, BIG trouble.

Pick up a copy of Space Dumplings at the main library children's desk to read before our meeting.

Second graders who will be entering third grade this September are welcome to join the Night Owls Book Club this summer. We can't wait to meet you!

Bubble Day

Join us Friday July 12 from 10-11 a.m. at the benches outside the Children's Room windows to blow some bubbles! We will have tubs of bubble solution and plenty of bubble makers to experiment with. Can you make giant bubbles? Little tiny bubbles? Can you make bubbles with your hands or do you need a bubble wand? Find out if a square bubble wand makes square bubbles and grab some bubble solution recipes to try out at home. Parents, this is sure to be loads of soapy, soaking fun so make sure your children are dressed to get messy!

This program must take place outdoors so in case of bad weather we will blow our bubbles on July 19th.

Children's Movie Matinee @North Quincy

On Monday afternoons at 2 p.m. this summer at the North Quincy Branch Library join us for a series of children's movie matinees, July 15th Spiderman: Into the Spiderverse PG runtime 120 min.

Ask Rusty – Age 70 Hasn't Yet Applied For Social Security

By RUSSELL GLOOR

AMAC Certified Social Security Advisor
Association Of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: How can I maximize my monthly Social Security benefit? I'm already 70 years old – almost 71 now. Signed: Ready to Apply.

Dear Ready to Apply: You've already maximized your monthly Social Security benefit by waiting until age 70 to apply. Age 70 is when you stop earning delayed retirement credits, which have boosted your monthly benefit amount by 32% over what you would have received at your full retirement age of 66, and by 76% over what you would have received if you had claimed benefits early at age 62. Your maximum Social Security benefit is reached in the month you turn 70 years of age, so you shouldn't delay any longer. Since you're now actually more than 70 (almost 71), you should immediately claim your Social Security benefit and you should also ask for 6 months of retroactive benefits, which SS will give you in a lump-sum. You can claim your benefits by contacting the Social Security office (find your local office at www.ssa.gov/locator) and making an appointment to apply for benefits, or you can apply online at www.ssa.gov. To apply online, you'll have to first set up your personal "My Social Security" online account at www.ssa.gov, and then complete and submit your application online. You should specify your "benefit start month" as six months before the date you apply to get the retroactive benefits.

If you are married, since you have not yet applied for benefits your wife is not yet receiving spousal benefits from your record. Assuming she has reached her full retirement age, her spousal benefit will be half of the benefit you were eligible to receive at your full retirement age, if that amount is more than she is entitled to on her own lifetime work record. If your wife was born on or before January 1st, 1954 she should contact your local Social Security office to file for her spousal benefit. If your wife was born January 2nd, 1954 or later, her spousal benefit should be automatically added to her own benefit when you claim, and she should not need to contact Social Security to apply. I encourage you both to claim these benefits as soon as possible, because each month you delay you are losing benefits which you are entitled to. This is true even if one or both of you are still working, because there is no penalty for working after you have reached full retirement age. And even if you're still working and paying FICA taxes monthly, your benefit will not increase just because you are still paying into Social Security.

More Development Seen On Hancock Lot

ments – and another building at the corner of the lot near the intersection of Revere Road and Ryan Parkway, which is known as R2 in city planning documents.

The proposed LDA is now pending before the City Council. In a recent interview, Koch said he expects discussions on the proposal will take place in the fall, once the council convenes following its summer recess.

"When the council gets back in session, we'll have some formal meetings on the next phase," he said.

The size of the two new buildings has yet to be determined, the mayor said, in part because LBC would have to acquire a stretch of buildings along Hancock Street to make the project on that part of the Hancock Lot viable.

"There is still a number of things that have to happen, including they have to get some more land control for the R3 piece to be doable. You've got some stores up there that they just haven't come to an agreement with yet. That's the big if. The ball is in their court in that regard," Koch said.

"Hopefully this summer they will make some progress and when the council is back in session, we can move things forward."

The other corner of the lot will be used as a staging area for the 15-story, 124-unit Chestnut Place building that is now under construction.

"The other one down the other end is R2 – the corner by the courthouse – that's in play, but that is going to be used as a lay-down area for a period of time yet, so there is no urgency on anything happening on that corner," Koch said. "There is already so much going on down there."

While the city has the ability to take properties by eminent domain to facilitate redevelopment efforts in Quincy Center, the mayor said he is not contemplating doing so to support the LBC project.

"We've told them that should be a private transaction," Koch said.

"I will say, generally speaking, that eminent domain is a great tool to have in the toolbox and when needed over time we may use it, because we certainly don't want one particular owner to be able to stop what could be a major project for the city that includes jobs and additional taxes and whole new uses. It's a fine line there. As you know, we used it on the Messina lot and the chances are we will use it on other locations, but we've asked the developer to try and go make that deal happen in private transactions."

One property Koch wants to take by eminent domain later this year is 1620 Hancock St. The building there was formerly home to a pizzeria but has sat boarded up and vacant since a 1997 fire.

"That's been very disappointing, quite frankly. I don't know how somebody can buy a building and just sit on it," Koch said. "That is definitely something I am eyeing in the fall for eminent domain taking."

The goal would be to find a new owner who could develop the site.

"We would put it in play for development and see what we could come up with either with abutting properties or with a new developer," Koch said. "That to me is a blight. They've had plenty of time to put a plan together – they haven't. We're not going to let it continue sit like that."

The property, he added, has potential for a mixed-use building above one or two levels of parking accessible from Mechanic Street.

"I think that whole block has tremendous potential," Koch said. "You've got a grade change, so you come off Mechanic Street at a lower grade for parking. You could get one or two stories under and then you could develop it at grade for Hancock Street. What we're seeing is what was going on in Europe for hundreds of years, which is retail on the first floor and residential above. That certainly might be an ideal location for some more of that."

"I know everyone screams, 'enough apartments and enough condos,' but the Boston region needs more units and towns like Braintree don't want to step up, so the pressure is on," the mayor added.

The MBTA has awarded development rights at the Quincy Center station to two firms, Atlantic Development of Hingham and Maryland-based Bozzuto Development. The two firms are currently constructing a mixed-use project at the North Quincy station.

Koch said the two companies are now in the midst of a due-diligence period as they begin to finalize plans for the Quincy Center station.

"They have a six-month period to do their due diligence, spend some money on engineering, architectural drawings, and then come back to the MBTA. They will be working with us right along, so we will know what they will present to the T," Koch said. "The goal is mixed-use. Some commercial, perhaps some residential and some retail.

PARKING GARAGE with room for 712 vehicles is nearing completion on the Hancock Lot. It is set to open early this fall. The cost to park in the new garage has yet to be determined, Mayor Thomas Koch said, but no major increase is seen over the current rates to park in Ross Lot.

"It's going to be a little trickier... The North Quincy project is being built over a parking lot. This will be built over an operating rapid transit station."

In addition to the residential projects underway on the Hancock Lot, the land will also be home a 712-space parking garage that is set to open in the early fall. A new civic space located between the garage and the buildings surrounding it on Hancock Street and Cottage Avenue will open at the same time.

Koch said the city is contemplating what it will call the new garage and the adjacent civic space.

"We haven't named it yet," he said. "We're kicking around some names not so much for the garage, but there is a pretty good-sized civic space that is going to be over there, and we've got to figure out what we're going to call it – that space between the garage and The Fours, which I think is going to become a fairly popular area."

"The Fours are sitting pretty. They've certainly gone through some disruption, but they are going to be in a good place when this is finished."

The city is also looking at programming for the civic space.

"There will be questions – do we bring the farmers market back and put it there? They seem to like it at Pageant, but when you see what you're going to have built around this – the amount of bodies that will be around this that can walk down and enjoy the market – it has some potential," Koch said.

"And just as we're starting to program the Hancock-Adams Common, I'm sure this will be programmed going forward as well next year with some different activities going on over there. It's a nice space for people to be able to use and enjoy."

The rates to park in the garage have yet to be determined, Koch said, but he does not anticipate them changing much from the rates drivers are now paying

QUINCY CHORAL SOCIETY recently presented the Father John W. O'Brien Award to Quincy Sun Publisher Robert Bosworth. The award recognizes individuals who have given extraordinary support to QCS and its mission. Quincy Choral Society Presents O'Brien Award To Robert Bosworth Publisher Of The Quincy Sun Honored

For its 2018-2019 season Quincy Choral Society has presented the Father John W. O'Brien Award to Robert Bosworth, publisher and editor of The Quincy Sun.

This honor is awarded to an individual who has given extraordinary support to QCS and its mission. The publicity given by The Quincy Sun to the chorus over several years has been invaluable in developing an enthusiastic audience for the choral group's musical performances, representatives from the QCS said.

The Father John W. O'Brien Award was established in 2014 to honor

Father O'Brien, who was the priest at Sacred Heart Church, Quincy, during the chorus's tenure performing there. Father O'Brien always went out of his way to make the chorus feel welcome.

Other recipients are George Dolbec (2015), President Insurance Agency, for generously providing for the insurance needs of the chorus, and The Rev. Arthur F. Wright (2018), the priest at St. Mary of the Hills, Milton, before retiring and who was gracious in making performance space available.

Quincy Choral Society was founded in 1981 for the purpose of bringing musical excellence to the South Shore and the world.

In December 2015, the Quincy City Council recognized Quincy Choral Society for bringing music and joy to the City of Quincy for 35 years. The chorus performs locally and has performed in music festivals in Washington, D.C., in Europe, at Carnegie Hall as part of the Masterworks Series, and most recently in Montreal and Quebec.

In September 2018, the Chorus participated in the Dedication of the Hancock-Adams Common.

Normand Grenier Retires After 34 Years With NeighborWorks

NeighborWorks Housing Solutions President Normand Grenier has retired from NeighborWorks Housing Solutions after working for the organization for the past 34 years.

Grenier served as NeighborWorks executive director from 1986 to 2009 and served as president from 2009 to 2019. He facilitated the growth of the agency from a neighborhood grass-root housing rehabilitation organization with a staff of four to its current status as a regional community development corporation serving over 35 towns and cities across Southern Massachusetts.

Grenier established strong partnerships with other nonprofit agencies including Habitat for Humanity, DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) Inc., the Mayor's Commission on the Family, and Father Bill's & MainSpring.

Grenier received a commendation from the state Sen. John F. Keenan.

"I was always impressed by the work you have done at NeighborWorks," Keenan said. "It reminded me of a quote from John Quincy Adams about leadership: 'If you inspire someone to dream more, learn more, do more and become more than you are a leader.' You look at this organization, you look how well it done its attributed to your leadership."

Grenier also received a commendation from Mayor Thomas Koch and the City of Quincy. "Your leadership and dedication at NeighborWorks has led to additional and improved housing opportunities for so many of our residents," Koch said.

Robert Corley, CEO of NeighborWorks Housing Solutions said, "Normand has dedicated his life to helping people and I've been blessed to have him as part of my daily work life for over 20 years."

QUINCY RESIDENT Tim Goldner (left) and Lori Schlatterer of Medford were among the 430 guests who attended the 15th annual A Wild Affair at the Stone Zoo. The food-tasting event and fundraiser featured some of the best restaurants and caterers in the Greater Boston area, live entertainment, animal encounters and more. This year's event raised over $57,000 in support of the operation and continued growth of Stone Zoo, its education programs and conservation initiatives.

City Council Recognizes Planning Board, Zoning Board Of Appeals

By SCOTT JACKSON

The City Council recently recognized the members of two city boards for volunteering their time to serve the city by reviewing various proposed developments.

The council presented commendations to the members of the Planning Board and Zoning Board of Appeals during its meeting on June 17.

City Council President Brad Croall credited the board members for due diligence and the effort and attention they put into reviewing each project that goes before them.

"As we go on break, I just felt it was so important to take a moment and recognize the men and women who volunteer their time, sometimes into the twilight of the next morning or late evening, deliberating on projects that impact people's lives throughout the city," Croall said.

"The Planning Board and the Zoning Boards are made up of volunteer members that keep a keen eye on the direction of the city. I can tell you, having been a longtime attendee of both boards, it is not an easy job. The amount of due diligence, the amount of attention, the amount of effort put forward by all the members is tremendous."

Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy said he has enjoyed his dealings with the board and their chairmen, Richard Meade of the Planning Board and Martin Aikens of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

"It's been a pleasure the year-and-a-half I've been on the council dealing with these gentlemen that we're honoring tonight," McCarthy said. "Both Richie Meade and Marty Aikens do their homework, they make it easy. They know their subjects. If they don't have enough information, they continue the hearing and try to get it right."

Meade, who was formerly the city's planning director, said Quincy has long been served well by the volunteers on the Planning Board.

PLANNING AND ZONING board members recently received commendations from the City Council in recognition of their service to the city. "In my 35 years of service with the Planning Department, during that period of time we always had dedicated Planning Board members who went to 1 and 2 o'clock in the morning in some meetings," Meade said. "The city of Quincy has been very fortunate, and that tradition continues with the present board."

Meade also thanked the staff of the Planning Department for the work they do to help the board out.

ZBA Vice Chairman Michael Covais thanked the council for the commendation and credited his board's clerk, Noreen Murphy, for the work she does on behalf of the board.

"We're going to keep everything nice and brief since that's what I always ask you guys to do when you come in front of us...I just want to say thank you," Covais said. "There are a lot of things going on the city, but the person I think is really so important is our clerk, Ms. Murphy, who actually keeps this whole thing running smoothly."

Koch: Quincy Fighting L.I. Bridge At 'Every Step'

By SCOTT JACKSON
Mayor Thomas Koch said Quincy will continue its campaign to block Boston's bid to rebuild the Long Island Bridge.

"We're still battling it every step of the way," Koch said in a recent interview.

Boston Mayor Marty Walsh unveiled plans to rebuild the bridge — a three-year project with an estimated cost of $92 million — in January 2018. The bridge would connect Moon Island to Long Island, allowing Boston to open a recovery campus on the latter. Quincy officials were quick to oppose the plan after Walsh's announcement, citing the impact the bridge would have on traffic in Squantum and North Quincy. The Quincy City Council in October approved a $250,000 appropriation Koch sought to fund bridge litigation and related legal and engineering work.

The Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection issued a superseding order of conditions, allowing Boston's proposal to rebuild the bridge to move forward. MassDEP issued its ruling following Boston's appeal of the Quincy Conservation Commission's decision to reject the plan to rebuild the bridge, and Quincy's appeal of the Boston Conservation Commission's decision to allow the project to move forward.

Quincy has appealed that decision by the DEP, Koch said, and is awaiting a date for a new hearing. The bridge, he added, would still require approval from the U.S. Coast Guard and Army Corps of Engineers.

Ultimately, Koch said a judge would likely be the one to decide whether or not the bridge gets the built.

Koch and other Quincy officials have said they are concerned about the possibility of development on Long Island should the bridge be built. Koch, in the recent interview, noted Walsh told The Boston Globe earlier this spring that Quincy would be given a say in any future development on the island, except for the recovery campus and Camp Harbor View.

"Marty Walsh in The Globe a few weeks ago acknowledged they are looking at other development to help pay for what he wants to do out there. That was the first time he finally admitted it. That was one of the questions from the neighbors," Koch said.

"Look, if it was what is was before, that's one thing, but if the island is going to be developed, we're talking about a lot more traffic going out there."

Koch said ferries would be a less expensive way to transport people to and from Long Island, pointing to a 2002 study commissioned by then Boston Mayor Thomas Menino that backed the use of a ferry to access Long Island.

"It's a beautiful island, I'll tell you. It's got some beautiful sections. At the end of the day, I just wish he would look at water transportation," Koch said.

"The Menino report showed that in the 2000s... that was the right way to go in deference to the neighbor to the south in particular and they acknowledged they weren't the best neighbor over the years. But [Walsh] is for whatever reason hell bent on the bridge."

Long Island is among the islands included as part of the Boston Harbor Islands National Recreation Area, but Koch said that designation does not prevent Boston from allowing development there.

"That doesn't really mean anything," Koch said of the island's inclusion in the national recreation area. "That was kind of a feel-good thing, so to speak."

opened for business in October 2016.

"It was very well done," Koch said. "It was very well laid out and secured. It was well thought out for sure."

When the Bay State's first recreational dispensaries opened late last fall, they were greeted by long lines of customers and an influx of traffic into the surrounding communities. Koch said he does not anticipate such a problem occurring with Ermont, because other shops have been opening steadily throughout the state to help meet the demand for marijuana.

"We will be prepared for that. For example, one of the more recent outfits said they were doing appointment only," Koch said when asked about potential impacts the store would have on traffic.

"When the first ones opened up it was every man for himself — all hell broke loose and people just lined up. I think there are ways to mitigate that and that was kind of just the first couple [stores]. There will probably be more open before this one opens, so I think the shine kind of wears off a little bit, people are finding other places to get it, so I don't know how intense it will be where this location is."

The mayor said he is concerned about the intersection of Willard Street and Ricciuti Drive, which is located a short distance from an off ramp of Interstate 93, but those concerns would exist regardless of Ermont.

"I'm concerned about that intersection anyway... We've really got to look at that whole piece," the mayor said. "It's tricky, because if we put in a signal, you can't back it up onto the highway. That can create some issues up there, so we've got some work to do on that."

"As far as the marijuana sales, if we do an appointment-only type thing that would help keep it under control."

Ermont will be required to negotiate a new host agreement with the mayor as part of the process to seek a license for recreational sales. Koch said a portion of any funding Quincy receives through the agreement would go toward substance-abuse programming for the city's children and teens.

"Some of those monies we would get from the host agreement we would use for prevention programs in the schools and the rec. department — more programs keeping the kids busy," he said.

State law also allows communities to impose a local sales tax of up to 3 percent on recreational marijuana. Legislation to adopt the local sales tax in Quincy is now pending before the City Council.

Other companies have also expressed interest in setting up shop in Quincy, Koch said.

"There are other companies that want to come in," he stated. "I don't want to see retail shops all over the place. I don't want to see them near schools, I don't want to see them in prominent locations in the business districts, but it has become the law of the land. There is a licensing process we will follow."

"I do think Ermont will be the first because they've got a track record and they've been up there — they already have a presence."

Koch in February 2018 introduced a zoning ordinance — still pending before the City Council — regulating where pot shops would be able open in the city. The proposed ordinance, which is similar to an approved ordinance concerning medical marijuana dispensaries, would in essence limit recreational stores to the vicinity of Quarry Hills, Crown Colony and the Fore River Shipyard. The mayor said he would prefer pot shops stay in those areas.

"What we did with the medical, is we pushed them to industrial areas. Essentially it was Quarry Hills, it was Crown Colony and it was the shipyard area. Whether we get challenged down the road on that with one of the retail operations...will be a question, but it didn't become an issue on the medical side," Koch said. "This is still kind of a new frontier in so many ways, so who knows what is going to happen."

Statewide, 53.6 percent of voters backed the 2016 ballot measure that legalized recreational marijuana sales, and 51 percent of voters in Quincy did so as well. Because a majority of Quincy voters approved the referendum, the mayor and City Council cannot ban marijuana establishments outright. The city would also be required to license up to seven pot shops — one for every five liquor stores in the city.

Downtown Construction Activities

Proposed work activities for the week of July 7th, 2019

- There will be a concrete pour for the new City garage this upcoming week on Tuesday or Wednesday (weather and scheduling dependent) starting at 5:00am. There will be concrete placements from July thru December for the 15-story Chestnut Place building on a weekly basis.
- The façade work on the 7-story Nova Residence at 1500 Hancock Street is about 80% complete. Multiple trades are working inside and out for a fall opening of the building. There will be multiple utility companies working in Hancock Street in the upcoming months. Dates and times for the utility work will be available as soon as the contractors are ready to start.
- Water quality units, drain manholes and catch basins are being installed in and around the buildings, garage and plaza area to collect ground water and surface water which will be redirected to the recently constructed culvert.
- Deck forms are being installed over the lower level of the garage. Once the deck forms and post tension cables are installed concrete will be placed on top of the forms which will serve as the roof for the lower level of the garage and the walking and driving entrance for the civic plaza and new City garage.
- The Hancock Lot developer is working with the contractor to repair the roadway surface on the lower half of Cottage Ave. until the final surface restoration of Cottage Ave is completed.

Cannons A Boom To City

Koch: Lacrosse Team's Games Have Gone Off 'Flawlessly'

By SCOTT JACKSON

Quincy played host to three Major League Lacrosse games this June, and Mayor Thomas Koch said they all went off without a hitch.

The Boston Cannons are in their first year playing home games at Veterans' Memorial Stadium after playing home games at Harvard Stadium in years past. The team will play eight games at home this season, beginning with the three games it played in June and ending in September. Each home game starts at 5 p.m. on a Saturday.

The Cannons are off to a 4-1 start. Upcoming home games are: Saturday, July 20 vs. Atlanta Blaze; Aug. 10 vs. Atlanta; Aug. 24 vs. Dallas Rattlers; Sept. 7 vs. Chesapeake Bayhawks; and Sept. 21 vs. Dallas.

Koch said the squad's first three matches all went smoothly from the city's perspective.

"Flawlessly," he said when asked how the team's games have gone. "We haven't gotten any complaints."

"What really is huge is that it's Saturday late afternoon. If they had weeknight games, it would be problematic with rush hour...but late Saturday seems to work.

"We worked hard putting a plan together - our team with their team - and they are following through on it, making sure everyone is parking where they are supposed to be. It's worked out pretty well."

The team has a multi-year lease to use Veterans' Memorial Stadium, Koch said, and made $1.7 million in improvements to the facility, including new seats, new locker rooms, a new video board and public address system.

"I think we have a ten-year deal with them. They were looking for obviously putting $1.7 million into the place, they wanted more than a year and I don't blame them," Koch said. "It's a major investment."

Having the Cannons play games at Veterans' Memorial Stadium is beneficial to the city, the mayor said. The games are broadcast on NBC Sports Boston, providing exposure for the city, he said, and local businesses benefit from the team's fans.

"I also see it as a benefit to Quincy," Koch said. "The games are televised - from Quincy, Mass. - that's all good PR for the city as well. I'm sure the restaurants are picking up some business from people after the games, so I think it's good for the local economy. It's another neat activity for people to go and enjoy whether you live here or you're a visitor. It's a great take."

Wollaston Hill Neighborhood Association Hosting Saturdays In The Park Series

This past Saturday, the Wollaston Hill Neighborhood Association (WHNA) hosted the first week of Saturdays in the Park, a summer series featuring a craft beer garden, food, live music, family fun, and wellness.

This event series runs each Saturday, noon to 6 p.m., through Aug. 3rd.

"We had a great day spending time with neighbors, while enjoying wonderful live music and the best in local craft beer at a beautiful neighborhood park," said Bob LaRocca, association board member and one of the event organizers.

Last Saturday's event kicked off with Yoga in the Park featuring Danielle Rizzo McKenna, sponsored by Maverick Wellness, as well as a neighborhood plant swap run by neighbor Lisa Johnson.

"Lisa's idea to host a neighborhood plant swap was a very popular addition to our program. We will be hosting the next plant swap on the 3rd of August," said Kathryn Hubley, the association vice president and wellness program organizer.

The Tapped Beer Truck poured the local beer all afternoon, while The Pearl Hot Dog Stand sold hot dogs. Both vendors are donating a portion of their proceeds to support the event. The afternoon was filled with live music from local favorites, The Gypsy Moths, who brought their garage-saloon-soul party to Safford Park.

"Such a great event. We look forward to coming back to play next summer," said Mark Donahue, the Gypsy Moths keyboard player.

This Saturday's line-up features: PiYo in the Park by instructor Samantha Cox from Fitness Unlimited, music by singer/songwriting Natalie Joly, the Tapped Truck Craft Beer Garden, the Pearl Hot Dog Stand, and the Quincy BBQ Guys.

All activities will take place between noon and 6 p.m. at Safford Park, 166 Beale St., Quincy. Visit WHNA's website for each week's schedule at www.wollastonhill.com.

The WHNA recommends public transportation; MBTA 211 bus stops at Safford Park.

Ward 3 Councillor Ian Cain presented the commendations to the board members of the Bernazzani, Montclair and Wollaston Elementary Schools' PTOs on June 17.

"These parents spend countless hours planning and raising tens of thousands of dollars for the benefit of the kids," he said.

"Because of the commitment of these parents, their children, their fellow students and these families are able to enjoy a more positive and holistic education and extracurricular community oriented educational experience."

The board members of the Bernazzani PTO honored were Brenda Lane, Deborah Stettler, Carly Bridden, Jennifer Lebo, Amy Clifford, Tricia Wood, Julieanne Tran, Christine Toland, Sarah Harrington and Michelle Andrews. The PTO, Cain said, organizes a number of annual events including a spring fair, talent shows and Red Sox outings, and ongoing efforts such as collecting box tops and textiles for recycling.

The Montclair PTO board members recognized were Marianne "Moe" Palmer, Jennifer Lyons, Rosanna Bastista, Laura Grande, Tara Burke, Joanne Robertson and Poonam Varule. Cain said they partnered with the 99 Restaurant to create a dining for a cause fundraiser, organized hat days and book fairs, a May festival and a holiday shopping bazaar.

Members of the Wollaston PTO board honored were Lisa Messing, Renee Packard, Jenny McGrail, Chuck McGrail, Donna Yang and Kirsten Goethert. The board organizes family fun days, ice cream socials, gardening events, international nights, teacher appreciation luncheons and an annual harvest festival, Cain said.

Norfolk Register Of Deeds O'Donnell Promotes Homestead Act

Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell is reminding Norfolk County homeowners about the importance of filing for Homestead protection.

Under Massachusetts law, a Homestead recording provides limited protection against the forced sale of an individual's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000.

"For most people, their home is the most important financial asset they have," O'Donnell said. "If you own a home, and it is your primary residence, one way to protect it is to file a Homestead. The Homestead law also allows for the filing of an Elderly Homestead application, which defines an elder as a person who is 62 years of age or older. This protection can be increased if the elderly couple files jointly."

O'Donnell further stated, "The Homestead law was enhanced by an act of the Massachusetts Legislature back in 2011. Language in the new law states a valid Homestead cannot be terminated when refinancing a mortgage. Other important changes include wording which states that a Homestead can provide protections for a primary home even if it is kept in trust. The definition of a primary residence has been further expanded to include a manufactured or mobile home."

While a Homestead provides important protections for homeowners, it is important to note there are certain debts that are exempted from protection under the Homestead Act. These include federal, state and local tax liens, as well as mortgages contracted for the purchase of a primary home and nursing home liens. Most other mortgages, debts, and encumbrances existing prior to the filing of the Declaration of Homestead, along with probate court exemptions for spousal and child support, are also not covered under the Homestead protection statute.

Homestead recordings can be filed at the Registry of Deeds for a state imposed fee of $36. To find out more about the Homestead law, or get a free application, go online to the Registry's website www.norfolkdeeds.org.

org or contact the Registry's Customer Service Center at 781-461-6101.

"A Homestead is an important consumer protection tool that provides limited protection against the forced sale of a homeowner's primary residence to satisfy unsecured debt up to $500,000," O'Donnell said.

"While the debt is still owed, homeowners can have peace of mind knowing that with a Homestead filed at the Registry of Deeds, their primary residence cannot be forcibly sold to satisfy most debts."

More Development Seen On Hancock Lot

to park in the Ross Lot.

"I don't know that they are going to change. There might be some minor changes," he said.

"I've said to people these will never be Boston rates. These will be very reasonable numbers for people, but we do have to pay for the garage and maintain the garage, so you can't have it for free."

Drivers headed to the new garage will be able to access it three different ways. The part of Cottage Avenue between Ryan Parkway and The Fours is being widened to accommodate two-way traffic, providing access to the garage that way. A second entrance would be located on Hancock Street where Payless ShoeSource and Fuji 1546 were formerly located — the buildings they were located in will be demolished and Cliveden Street extended over Hancock Street to reach the new garage. Drivers headed west on Revere Road would be able to access the same entrance by taking a right-hand turn to a new driveway.

Gas Prices Up Two Cents

Gasoline prices in Massachusetts are up two cents this week, according to AAA Northeast.

AAA's July 8 survey of prices in Massachusetts finds self-serve, regular unleaded averaging $2.69 per gallon. The Massachusetts price is six cents lower than the national average for regular unleaded of $2.75. A year ago at this time, the average price in Massachusetts was seventeen cents higher at $2.86.

"Despite prices either steadying or rising over the last two weeks, motorists are still benefitting from the fact that prices locally are lower than the national average and well below what they were a year ago at this same time," said Mary Maguire, director of Public and Legislative Affairs.

The range in prices in the latest AAA survey for unleaded regular is 52 cents, from a low of $2.53 to a high of $3.05.

Morrisette Bows To Holbrook, 6-4

By TREVOR WENNERS

One bad inning in baseball can change the whole complexion of a game.

The Quincy Post 294 baseball team held a 3-2 lead at the end of 1 1/2 innings on Sunday at Holbrook Post 137 in American Legion District 6 action, but then the hosts responded with five hits and four runs in the bottom of the second, catapulting Holbrook to a 6-4 win.

Post 294 (9-1) suffered its first loss of the season, while Holbrook (3-10) avenged a 12-0 loss in five innings to Morrisette at Adams Field on June 24. Post 137 played error-free baseball in the win, while Quincy made two costly errors, which led to a combined four unearned runs.

Douglas Concannon was tagged with the loss for Quincy, pitching the entire six innings, as he only gave up two earned runs. He relinquished seven hits, while striking out four and walking one. Concannon did not give up a single hit in his final 4 1/3 innings, with only one base runner during that span coming by way of a walk. He posted 1-2-3 innings in the third, fifth and sixth.

From an offensive standpoint, Quincy was led by John Joyce (3 for 3, two singles, double, two runs) and Curtis-Frazier (2 for 4, two singles).

Starting pitcher Joseph Cunningham earned the win in five innings of work for Post 137. He allowed three earned runs and four hits, while walking three, hitting three, and striking out one. He got out of a major jam in the fourth; not allowing a single run after Post 294 put runners on second and third with one down.

Post 137 received strong offensive efforts by Christian Mello-Alcantara (2 for 3, double, single, two runs, RBI) and Dylan Barkas (2 for 2, double, single, walk, two runs, RBI).

"Holbrook played better than us and outplayed us defensively," said Post 294 coach Steve Maze. "Douglas pitched a great game. I do not think they outpitched us. There was one inning where we did not play defense and they got to six."

Holbrook took an early 2-0 lead in the first, as Mello-Alcantara and Barkas tallied a one-out single and double, respectively. During the ensuing at-bat with two runners in scoring position, Joseph Fischer belted a sacrifice fly to left, and then the unit took a 2-0 lead during the next at-bat as a result of a fielding error during an infield ground ball by Donovan Potemri.

Quincy took its first and only lead of the game in the second. The squad loaded up the bases with one out, and then Daniel Scolaro recorded an RBI when he was hit by a pitch. The game was knotted at 2-2 as a result of William McCarthy crossing home on a wild pitch. A sacrifice fly to center by Matthew Joyce scored John Joyce, putting the visitors in front, 3-2.

Aiden Barrett led off the second with a ground-rule double down the left-field line for Post 137. He scored two batters later on an RBI ground out to first by Eric Ficarra, evening the game at 3-3. A costly error with two down allowed Cameron Clark to reach, and then Holbrook quickly made it hurt with three straight RBI hits by Mello-Alcantara (double), Barkas (single) and Fischer (double), giving the team a 6-3 cushion.

In the sixth, Quincy pulled to within two on a two-out, RBI single up the middle by Matthew Joyce, scoring John Joyce, who led off the frame with a double down the left-field line.

Morrisette made some noise in the seventh, putting runners on first and second with no outs, but Fischer was able to close out the game with a two-inning save for Holbrook. Post 137 closed out the game with a 4-6-3 double play.

"In the seventh, we had our chance," said Maze. "We had first and second with no one out and 5-6-7 coming up, but we could not get it done. We hope a loss like this kind of wakes everybody up and people say it is time to get back on track."

On Monday night, Morrisette bowed to Hyde Park, 3-0. Morrisette visits Canton Thursday at 5:45 p.m. and hosts Cohasset Friday at 7:30 p.m. at Adams Field.

As McCauley Sees It

How Bob Mueller Got Even With Donald Trump

By FRANCIS X. McCAULEY

Memo to President Trump:

You never, never, never, never criticize an individual who is conducting a political investigation on you.

As Special Prosecutor Robert Mueller prepares to testify before Congress on July 17 about his investigation into allegations of Russian collusion with the Trump campaign, some are calling the Mueller report a victory for the president.

I disagree. Rather, I believe Mueller used the report as a way to get even with Trump.

Marc A. Thiessen, a good guy who writes for the Washington Post, authored a piece that appeared in the Patriot Ledger April 27/28, 2019. Thiessen noted that President Trump called the Mueller investigation a "witch hunt" nearly 200 times on social media alone.

In his report, Mueller went to great lengths to detail the exhaustive nature of his investigation into allegations that members of the Trump campaign conspired with the Russian government in its efforts to interfere in the 2016 U.S. presidential election or sought to obstruct the related federal investigations. According to Mueller, he appointed 19 lawyers who were assisted by a team of approximately 40 FBI agents, intelligence analysts, forensic accounttants and other professional staff.

In addition, the special counsel issued more than 2,800 subpoenas, executed nearly 500 search warrants, obtained more than 230 orders for communications records, issued almost 50 orders for use of pen registers, made 13 requests to foreign governments for evidence, and interviewed approximately 500 witnesses.

Despite this in-depth investigation, the special counsel was unable to establish that the Trump campaign conspired or coordinated with the Russian government in its election interference activities - despite multiple offers from Russian-affiliated individuals to assist the Trump campaign.

Indeed, Attorney General William Barr stated that after reviewing Mueller's final report, both he and Deputy Attorney General Rod Rosenstein concluded that "the evidence developed during the special counsel's investigation is not sufficient to establish that the president committed an obstruction of justice offense. In making this determination, we noted that the special counsel recognized that the evidence does not establish an underlying crime related to Russian interference."

So, how did Mueller get even with Trump? By including the following statement in his report:

"While this report does not conclude that the president committed a crime, it also does not exonerate him."

While I am not a lawyer, it's clear that this statement not only flies in the face of the central principle of our justice system - innocent until proven guilty - but also directly contradicts the very findings of the report itself.

Mueller's statement also assumes a power that special prosecutors don't possess. As another good guy, former prosecutor Andrew McCarthy, observed, prosecutors don't exonerate people. They base their investigations on the presumption of innocence. They either indict or they don't indict.

"While this report does not conclude that the president committed a crime, it also does not exonerate him."

By including that one sentence in his report - despite having found no evidence of wrongdoing by the president - Robert Mueller gave congressional Democrats the opening they have been seeking to press for impeachment. Whether Mueller continues to try and get even with Trump will be seen on July 17.

Francis X. McCauley is a former mayor of Quincy and longtime Republican activist in Quincy and served as an elected member of the MA Republican State Committee.

Maeve Walsh Nominated To U.S. Naval Academy

Cong. Stephen F. Lynch announces the nomination of Maeve Walsh of Quincy for appointment to the U.S. Naval Academy.

Walsh, the daughter of Patrick and Theresa Walsh, is a 2019 graduate of Quincy High School.

As part of his congressional duties, Lynch nominates exemplary candidates to the service academies each year.

"These candidates are the best of the best, and I am proud of their desire to serve our country," said Lynch. "The academies graduate leaders who will guide our nation into the future and the men and women who attend the academies are entrusted with the greatest responsibility - to serve and protect the United States of America."

Walsh was highly recommended by her teachers at Quincy High School.

"She is a remarkable young woman, and we are fortunate that young people like Maeve are willing to serve our nation," Lynch said.

Lynch and his congressional liaison to the United States Service Academies, Bob Fowkes, examined each candidate's record of academic, athletic, and service achievements in addition to evaluating letters of recommendation. After an extensive review process and a personal interview, Walsh was selected as someone whose scholastic record and community contributions elevated her to the top of a list of well-qualified candidates.

"There were many impressive candidates this year for the United States Naval Academy," Lynch said. "Maeve stood out as a young woman of keen intelligence and strong character. She is a wonderful reflection of her parents, Patrick and Theresa. The Walsh family, the City of Quincy, and the entire Commonwealth of Massachusetts should be proud of Maeve in this achievement."

Students interested in attending one of the United States Service Academies should contact Bob Fowkes in Cong. Lynch's Boston office at (617) 428-2000.

JUL

On Saturday, June 29, at approximately 12:15 p.m., Officers Connell and McNeil responded to Lawry Street for a report of a family disturbance. Police Communications advised responding officers that a third party caller was reporting the incident and it was unclear whether the involved male was still on scene.

Upon arrival, the officers located a male sitting on the front porch and engaged him in a conversation. Officer McNeil then went into the house to speak with the female. The male said he is currently living in Florida and this is his ex-girlfriend's house. He said he came here to see his son and advised his ex that he was on his way to the house.

At this time, Officer Connell noticed the male moving away from him so he advised the male to sit on the porch, which he did briefly but then walked into the yard. The officer also noted the male kept pulling at his clothing and fidgeting with his hands while looking down the street. Officer Connell suspected the male was creating a plan of escape.

Officer McNeil then exited the house after speaking with the ex, who said that they had a bad relationship and his visit was unexpected. The officers then checked the male's information with Communications for warrants. While waiting for results, the officers noticed the male kept trying to move the conversation down the driveway as if setting up a route to flee the scene or looking to hide something in the driveway.

Communications informed units the male had two warrants. Based on the elusive actions taken by the male, Officer Connell requested a third officer present before informing the male about the warrants. As soon as Officer Millane arrived on scene, Officer McNeil advised the male of the warrants. The male immediately attempted to flee by running past Officer Millane, who intercepted him and pinned him against a cruiser.

The male struggled with the officers as they tried to grab his arms to handcuff him. The male was brought to the ground, at which point he began yelling, "I have a piece - I have a piece," referring to a handgun. The officers quickly put the male in handcuffs. The male then screamed out, "I have a piece in my pocket." He was searched and a revolver was seized from his front right pocket. During the struggle, a plastic corner bag filled with heroin fell out of the male's pocket. Sgt. Daniel Flaherty arrived on scene and demanded the male produce his license to carry a firearm. The male did not have a license. Detective Monteith also responded to the scene and took the firearm and the plastic bag with the heroin into evidence. The male was transported to the station by Officer Millane.

Officer Connell then interviewed the female, who was the ex's daughter. She said she was home alone when she heard a knock at the front door. She opened the door and was confronted by the male, who she did not like because he had been abusive toward her mother. She added she has not seen him in over four years. She stated the male tried to walk inside the house but the female reacted quickly and shut the door. She then called the police who arrived quickly.

Officer Connell assisted the female in obtaining an emergency restraining order which was served to the male in the station. After all calmed down, the victim told Sgt. Flaherty that she was extremely thankful for the officers at the scene because "they saved my life."

The male, a 38-year-old Jacksonville, FL resident, was charged with carrying a loaded firearm without a license, possession of a controlled substance, Class A subsequent offense, resisting arrest and with two warrants.

HOLLYWOOD

by Tony Rizzo

HOLLYWOOD -- Bradley Cooper, one of the producers of "Joker," with Joaquin Phoenix and Robert De Niro (due Oct. 4), has agreed to replace Leonardo DiCaprio in "The Shape of Water" Oscar-winning director Guillermo del Toro's upcoming remake of the 1947 Tyrone Power/Joan Blondell film "Nightmare Alley." Wondering how hard will it be for Bradley to be directed after he directed himself in the epic "A Star Is Born"?

 Also getting the remake treatment is Noel Coward's "Blithe Spirit," which was made into a film in 1945 starring Rex Harrison and Margaret Rutherford, directed by David Lean. The play has often been produced on Broadway, and even as a musical, most recently with Angela Lansbury. This time it will feature "Beauty and the Beast" star Dan Stevens, Dame Judi Dench, Isla Fisher and Leslie Mann. In addition to the TV series "Legion," Dan Stevens has Jack London's "Call of the Wild," with Harrison Ford, due Feb. 21; "Lucy in the Sky," with Natalie Portman and Jon Hamm; and the horror film "The Rental," written/produced/directed by Dave Franco, and co-starring Alison Brie.

 CNN newsman Jake Tapper's 2012 novel, "The Outpost: An Untold Story of American Valor," about 53 U.S. soldiers who battled 400 enemy insurgents in Afghanistan, is now a film called "The Outpost," which stars Orlando Bloom, Scott Eastwood (son of Clint) and 28-year-old Milo Gibson (son of Mel), and is set for a December release. We lost the great Italian director Franco Zeffirelli June 15. He was 94. His classic films included "The Taming of the Shrew" (1967), with Liz Taylor and Richard Burton, the Oscar-nominated "Romeo and Juliet" (1968), "The Champ" (1979), "Endless Love" (1981) and "Tea with Mussolini" (1999) with Cher, Judi Dench, Maggie Smith and Lily Tomlin. Zeffirelli had flair and style.

Henry Golding became an instant star due to "Crazy Rich Asians" and "A Simple Favor," with Anna Kendrick and Blake Lively. His next two films are "Last Christmas," with "Game of Thrones" star Emilia Clarke and Emma Thompson (due Nov. 8), and the crime drama "The Gentlemen," directed by Guy Ritchie and starring Matthew McConaughey, Charlie Hunnam, Colin Farrell, Hugh Grant and "Downton Abbey's" Michelle Dockery.

 "Leaving Las Vegas" Oscar-winner Nicolas Cage made six films this year, but we can tell you only about three: the sci-fi film "Color Out of Space," with Joely Richardson, the animated "The Croods 2" and the comic book-based martial-arts action film "Jiu Jitsu." The others are so obscure we can't find out anything about them. Guess Cage, like Eric Roberts, is not very selective, or is it they just want to work ... in anything?

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Stumpwork Box -- Ever notice stumpwork in an antiques auction or shop? It is a type of early embroidery that makes raised designs on a flat textile to make a three-dimensional design. It uses wire or padding to stuff the figure made of thread. This difficult type of embroidery was popular in England from about 1650 to 1700, but it was called "raised" or "embossed" work until the 1890s. Stumpwork was used on clothing, decorative boxes and pictures. Girls learned to embroider as young as 8 years old, and the training culminated with the production of a box, often with the name and date of the embroiderer. Today, these boxes sell for thousands of dollars. An example made in 17th-century England on silk fabric with flowers, insects and birds, two well-dressed women framed in wreaths, and many other figures and bits of flora and fauna was auctioned in Massachusetts. It was estimated at $2,500 to $5,000, but sold for $9,225. The box had doors and small drawers for storage of writing supplies.

 Q: My 39-year-old toy lead soldiers are turning grey and then white, and are covered with a white dust when kept in a box for a long time. How can I store them safely?

A: Your toy soldiers have "tin pest." Years ago, all tin was made with some impurities, like lead or other metals. This tin alloy was more stable than the nearly pure tin used in many electronic devices and in some tin soldiers. Cold weather makes the tin become "white tin" that is brittle, and then it becomes "grey tin." And when stored in very cold temperatures, it turns into a powder called "powder pest" or "tin pest." There is no cure if it is very cold.

 Q: What can you tell me about Briglin Pottery? I bought a pin dish marked "Briglin" at a house sale and would like to know when it was made. What can you tell me about the company?

A: Briglin Pottery was a studio pottery founded in London in 1948 by Brigitte Goldschmidt and Eileen Lewenstein. Earthenware mugs, jugs, plates and other items were made. Lewenstein left the pottery in 1959. It closed in 1990. Pieces are very low-priced. A pin dish would cost under $10.

Strange BUT TRUE

* It was Robert Wright, journalist, scholar and author of best-selling books about science, who made the following sage observation: "Like a lawyer, the human brain wants victory, not truth; and, like a lawyer, it is sometimes more admirable for skill than virtue."

* Famously flamboyant country singer and songwriter Dolly Parton once entered a Dolly Parton look-alike contest ... and lost.

* The small Asian country of Bhutan, nestled in the mountains between China and India, had no access to TV until 1999.

* You've doubtless heard of narcolepsy, a medical condition that causes sufferers to sleep excessively -- sometimes up to 18 hours a day. You're probably not familiar with philagrypnia, though. People with this condition -- I won't call them "sufferers" -- require only three or four hours of sleep a day. What would you do with all that extra time?

* Those who study such things say that the average woman changes her hairstyle 20 times between the ages of 18 and 24. Between the ages of 50 and 80, though, women change it only four times.

* Now that summer is here in full force, you might want to keep in mind the fact that there are 1,500 known species of fleas and 9,500 known species of ants. Then again, that might be a factoid you'd rather forget.

* The English word "velvet" comes from the Latin for "shaggy hair."

* If you're out in the American West, you may see the iconic saguaro cactus. It matures extremely slowly -- it might grow only 6 inches in its first 10 years of life. It's persistent, though; the largest known specimen reached 60 feet in height.

 Thought for the Day: "Politics is not the art of the possible. It consists in choosing between the disastrous and the unpalatable." -- John Kenneth Galbraith

Now here's a tip!

by Jo Ann Derson

* "When my brother had a job in my town, naturally he came to stay at my house. But he was working nights and really needed to sleep during the day. We purchased a few pieces of poster board at the dollar store and lined the windows in the room he was sleeping in. They really cut out the light, and pretty much stayed put when tucked behind the blinds. He was able to get a few hours of good sleep and the poster board can be used again." -- M.R. in Arizona

* Glass candleholders can make a nice storage for bathroom items like cotton swabs and cotton balls, even small products can be organized into these pretty holders.

* "I like having a reusable straw since I feel bad about all the plastic out there. The problem is that silicone straws are not stiff enough because I like ice in my drinks, and I don't like the feeling of a metal straw. I found some metal straws that have a little silicone tip, and now I have the best of both worlds!" -- P.A.

* Regularly review your subscription memberships and recurring bills. Things like meal boxes, online services, cosmetics club memberships and even automatic razor deliveries can get out of hand. Set aside time every couple of months to decide if you are really using/benefitting from the services. Cancel if you are not.

* If you have fruit that is on the edge of going bad, throw it in your freezer. You'll have a ready supply of smoothie ingredients, and things like grapes, orange sections and berries taste downright refreshing when served frozen on a hot day.

John J. Carney

A funeral Mass for John J. "Jack" Carney of Marston's Mills, formerly of Quincy, was celebrated July 6 in Our Lady of Victory Church, Centerville.

Mr. Carney died peacefully June 30 surrounded by family.

The beloved husband of Delia M. (Lyons) Carney for 52 years, he will be painfully missed and forever remembered by the lives he has touched throughout his 80 years.

Born in Dorchester in 1939 to John and Ellen (Waters) Carney, both of whom he missed too early, Mr. Carney grew up with two adoring sisters: the late Mary Collins (Milton) and the late Catherine "Bunnie" Durkan (Dorchester). A graduate of Boston College and a United States Marine, Mr. Carney went on to earn his MBA from Babson College and a Master of international taxation from Widener University. After a long and successful career in finance, he retired as president of Spectra Physics USA, but not from his lifelong passion for learning.

Outside of his many professional achievements, Mr. Carney loved exploring the world and sharing stories of his travels to Europe and Costa Rica to a wide-eyed audience. No matter the trip, he always made time to stop in County Mayo to wine and dine Delia's mother, Mary Kate. A man dedicated to his faith, and to the service of others in his community, Mr. Carney was a communicant at Our Lady of Victory in Centerville, long-time Eucharistic minister at St. Joseph Parish in Quincy, and former president of the Boston College Evening College Alumni Association. Whistling along the way, Mr. Carney started each morning with a song in his heart and a rhythm in his step, eager to face the day with humility, intelligence, and a joyous sense of humor. What Mr. Carney cherished most, however, and what he would likely consider to be his greatest achievement, is the unbreakable bond he shared with his wife, children, and grandchildren, with whom he adopted his third name, "Grampy."

Mr. Carney built a beautiful life on the strongest foundation he knew: that of hard work, unconditional love, and compassion for all. It seems unfair that, in missing him, we also lose the person that never failed to give us a reason to smile. It is by this undying support, as well as his contagious spirit for adventure, that his family will remember him most. Mr. Carney never let the limitations of age prevent him from visiting loved ones, supporting his grandchildren, or buying a card and gift for his wife on every occasion. Even a battle with Parkinson's could not limit the extent of his wanderlust. Never one to pass up an early tee time at the Barnstable Fairgrounds, a morning in his garden, a long afternoon of fishing or quahogging, or a weekend hiking and camping in the mountains, Mr. Carney most treasured the days he was outside in nature, celebrating the gift of life with family and friends—a tall glass of lemonade never too far from reach.

In addition to his wife Delia, he will be missed by daughter Colleen Connelly of Quincy and her children Caitlin and Caroline; daughter Cathleen and husband Ralph Delorie of Hingham and their children, Delia, Catherine, and Sean; daughter Carolyn and husband Sean Dinneen of Plymouth and their children Nora, Bridget, and Celia; son John Carney Jr. of Yarmouth; son Michael and wife Veronica Carney of Norwell and their children Nola Mae and Brennan; and son Paul Carney and fiancé Lina of Brooklyn, NY. He is also survived by several nieces, nephews, and cousins. As we say "Sweet Dreams" to our Jack/Dad/Grampy, there is with no doubt he is entering heaven with his familiar "Rise and Shine!" We love you, Grampy. Safe home.

Interment at St. Francis Xavier Cemetery, Centerville.

Funeral arrangements were made by the John-Lawrence Funeral Home, Marston's Mills.
